

STOP BULLYING

MARTY MCFELY...

Comes out on top!

Marty was played by Michael J. Fox in the film, Back to the Future. Marty and his father George were both victims of bullies at the same high school, but at different points in time. The time machine allows them to help each other gain self-confidence and achieve their dreams. Though humorous and not to be taken literally, Back to the Future does accurately touch upon the effects of bullying.

REVIEW ONLY

Comes out on top!

When he was a teenager, Justin had terrible acne and was picked on for trying to become a singer. Now, he is an international pop star. Justin says: "When you're a kid I think you try so hard to fit in, and when you get older you realize that fitting in isn't really the thing that's more interesting ... I would not be here if I would have listened to the kids who told me 'I was a terrible singer and I was a sissy ... Be different.'"

DO NOT SUBMIT FOR PRINT

Comes out on top!

NFL star Drew Brees was bullied as a kid because of his facial birthmark — and now his fans wear stickers shaped like his birthmark. "Appreciate people for how they are different from you -- that's what it takes to be a friend."

#TAUNTING

DISRESPECT